

Making a difference through education

Historic Annapolis Foundation believes that history should be enlightening and enjoyable. Through a variety of educational activities including dynamic school programs, tours led by costumed interpreters, 18th-century music and dancing, tavern traipses, and family festivals, the Foundation has created learning opportunities that provide a direct connection to the past.

Education

"I know all the parents and children felt a connection to early Annapolis when we visited, and we all certainly appreciate your role as caretakers of history. Hopefully, the seeds we plant in these young people will grow and develop into a lifelong love of history."

— Lisa Jenkins, 5th grade teacher

Making a difference through preservation

Along with the efforts of concerned citizens and members, Historic Annapolis Foundation has worked to preserve the historic buildings that give Annapolis its distinctive character. Today, the Foundation continues this work by offering expertise in the renovation of historic properties, maintaining a research center documenting the history and buildings of Annapolis, and providing advice and advocacy for historic preservation efforts, as well as through the management and ownership of ten historically significant properties.

"The Foundation seems to be undergoing its own renaissance, an exciting prospect. I have always supported them and never have regretted it."

— Michael E. Ashford, Historic District resident and owner of McGarvey's Saloon

Furthering Our Heritage

Since 1952, Historic Annapolis Foundation has been dedicated to furthering the heritage of one of America's finest cities. What started as a grassroots effort to preserve the city has evolved into a dynamic organization charged with the mission of ensuring that the traditions and character of Maryland's capital city will be honored and upheld for generations to come.

Today, Annapolis attracts world-wide attention as a first-class example of the harmonious blend of old and new, of tradition and technology. This did not happen by chance. The efforts of hundreds of concerned citizens working toward a common goal have made Annapolis the destination of choice for businesses and vacationers alike.

Whether you know us for our preservation efforts, our research, our educational programs, or our family events, we invite you to join us in our ongoing efforts to keep Maryland's capital a vital and popular city.
